SCOPE

The Corruption & Crime Commission needed help to transition from a traditional cellular office space across six floors to a more flexible adaptive work space. The business used their recent business relocation as an opportunity to re-brand and reshape the public's perception of the organisation. SPH architecture described the project objective "to present a transparent, open and welcoming public entry with a classic, modern aesthetic that extends and develops into the Public Examination Rooms with increasing levels of gravitas." This was a strong consideration for us when implementing our products within the space, ensuring they adhered to this objective and complemented the overall architectural vision.

THE SPACE

In conjunction with other project stakeholders, we worked to facilitate a design that catered for nine departments within the business, high privacy and security requirements, the courtroom, interview room and a new public interface.

SOLUTION

The finished space featured Lotus' solid, fabric faced Operable Walls (with high acoustic rating) between meeting spaces as well as our Opera double glazed panels incorporating switchable glass technology. Lightweight Operable walls were also used as a movable screen to section off the equipment storage area. Challenges of this project included remote stacking configurations and intersecting walls incorporating full height panel hung pass doors in conjunction with switchable glass.

As specialists in bespoke office fit-outs, we took pride in working with the other project stakeholders to deliver this installation with minimal disruption to the business, on time and to the highest standard.

“We were very happy with the work delivered by Lotus for this project. Their professionalism and attention to detail helped ensure a smooth process for everyone involved, and we were very impressed with the way that their high-quality wall and door products complemented the overall vision for the CCC across multiple departments.

In particular, the Switchglass function added a fantastic versatility to the space, being able to create privacy at the press of a button. Very important in a business that emphasised their high security and confidentiality requirements to us. We would happily recommend Lotus to others, and engage them for future endeavours.”
